The future working people want

This is the fourth in a series of messages we will be sending to keep you up to date on the plans we have put together for the upcoming UN Conference on Sustainable Development - Rio+20, as well as our own associated event - The Trade Union Assembly on Labour and Environment (11-13 June).

Where are the negotiations at?

The last informal Rio+20 negotiations session closed on Saturday, 2 June and the least we can say is that governments will have a heavy duty to give their Heads of State a draft Declaration that is worth signing.

When it comes to union priorities there is overall support for the broad concepts of Decent Work and Social Protection (including the floor). However, we face fierce opposition to concrete proposals: on the one side, developed countries (notably some more than other like the US, Canada, Australia and Japan; with EU and Switzerland as exceptions) oppose the launch of initiatives aimed at « doing something » with these concepts - the launch of a 'social protection for all by 2030' initiative supportive of ILO work on this issue as well as the adoption of a 'decent work for all' objective, aimed at eliminating working poverty, reducing unemployment, growing green and decent jobs and ensuring gender equity at the workplace. This leaves us wondering if some developed countries think that the challenges of unemployment and working poverty can be solved without cooperation at the international level.

On the other side, G77 (representing developing countries) opposes references to the need to promote the greening of all jobs and the creation of green jobs. How do they think we will build sustainable development if the world of work is not part of the transformation?

On a more general note, major discrepancies remain between governments on references to Rio principles such as

- Common but differentiated responsibilities and equity;
- the need for new financial resources and technology transfer to promote sustainable development (the Financial Transactions Tax has not been included yet as an option); and
- the extent to which Sustainable Development Goals will be developed in Rio or after.

Key union amendments will be distributed this week to all affiliates, for you to contact your government prior to the next PrepCom, which will be held in Rio de Janeiro (13-15 June) and the Rio Summit (20-22 June).

What is happening and where in Rio?

Take action: Ensure our proposals reach Heads of State!

Union calls for decent work/green jobs and the social protection floor are selected amongst the top 10 issues for the employment discussion in the Rio Dialogues. In order to reach the top 3, to be taken up with heads of state, we need your vote. This time it is really easy to do!

Go to vote.riodialogues.org/, choose the "Employment, decent work and migration" cluster.

Vote for these proposals:

- Governments to commit to a Social Protection and Decent Work for all goal by 2030, including access to health, unemployment, ill health, maternity, child protection and disabled people.
- Set national goals for green jobs based on assessments in terms of current and potential value, gender dimension, working conditions and other aspects of the decent work agenda.

Next; Go to: Sustainable Development as an answer to Economic and Financial Crisis cluster

Vote for

- Create a tax on international financial transaction with a view to contributing to a Green Fund in charge of promoting decent jobs and clean technologies."

And that's it! Please tell your colleagues, friends, family, networks and community to visit vote.riodialogues.org/ and "Vote for the Future We Want." But be quick, voting closes June 15th 2012.
