Public Finance Control and Anti-Corruption Strategies Forum

Corruption is much more than a moral issue. It undermines public services and democracy. Policies which favour privatisation of public services create the conditions which are most favourable to corruption.

Corruption wastes public money by diverting it into the hands of corrupt politicians, businesses and their agents. It steals wealth from countries and places it in tax havens.

Ending corruption requires public and political organising to demand that governments represent public interests, instead of rich individuals and powerful companies, and to hold them accountable.

Public Services International union leaders from Argentina (Latin American Union Network of Workers of Control Bodies), Canada (Association of Canadian Financial Officers) and South Korea (Korean Federation of Public Services and Transportation Workers' Unions) will speak about their respective struggles to combat corruption and advance quality public services for the common good.
